

URGES FARMERS TO TAKE INTEREST IN OUR FOREIGN TRADE

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 25.—A call to the farmers to interest themselves in foreign trade was made by B. F. Harris, a banker of Champaign, Ill., and member of the National Foreign Trade Council, at the annual convention of the organization here today. Describing himself as a "corn belt farmer," Mr. Harris offered "Transportation, Trade and Thrift," as a triad of "P's" under whose sign farmers, manufacturers, producers and consumers, labor and capital, town and country, will conquer.

Declaring that "we farmers are economic illiterates in production and distribution," he said: "For fifty years the farmer has been feeding the people of the United States at less than the cost of production, throwing in his, and his children's, and the nation's blitheness of soil fertility."

"He is the solitary producer who has no voice, and though properly rebellious, has in no successfully organized or concerted manner sought voice in the pricing of his products, and those who set the prices for him know little and care less as to the actual cost of production, nor of the wastes that lie between."

"High prices do not represent the farmer's greed," he said, "but are innocent by-standers, buffeted by the market-makers, his share of what the consumer pays sometimes looking like 30 cents, and not infrequently he works sixteen hours to provide food for the 5-hour fellows. He is not a tradesman and co-operative plans with government help in stabilizing market situations is required."

The farmer has profited and is profiting by the great war export business more than anyone, said Mr. Harris, but has done so without having taken any heed to foreign trade problems, simply allowing the foreign consumer to come and take away grains, cotton, fruits, dairy products, and many other articles in his own ships. The farmer was now coming to realize how much he and all have been at the mercy of foreign shipping, and "land locked and lumbered though he be," the American farmer was becoming "an anxious as any good American to see the stars and stripes in every port of the world, not simply because it would be carrying some of his products and be ready to respond as auxiliary to a great American navy, but his vision is widening and he wants all the world to realize and be girdled by the spirit of American ideas and her industry."

Mr. Harris spoke also of the tariff, and said: "We must drop the old bugbear of high or low, protection, or revenue only—in connection with the Department of Commerce, Tariff Commission, Federal Trade Commission, Shipping Board and Consular Department—think of it as a great business getting and nation developing organization of Americans for America."

GREEN COUNTY FARMERS FORM SOCIETY OF EQUITY

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Monroe, Wis., Jan. 24.—Green county farmers are organizing a co-operative society under the name of the Society of Equity, for the purpose of buying supplies at wholesale and holding their products, thereby cutting out the middlemen. The final meeting before the closing of the charter will be held on Saturday afternoon at the circuit court room.

The meeting was addressed by H. E. Holmes of Madison, who has aided in the organization, and at that time the farmers will arrange for the buying of binder twine and alfalfa seed for the coming year, also the ordering of several carloads of feed.

THE WHATCHAMA COLUMN.

Laundries. The Department of Commerce bulletins, "is desirous of purchasing machinery for a small laundry." What anybody wants with a laundry in Mexico is more than we understand, but since it is so we append a partial list of things he should get:

Above all he must have a button smashing machine; any laundry worthy of the name feels no guilty when escape.

Then he will need a collar ripper and cuff frayer. This indispensable little contrivance will utterly demoralize the strongest shirt that was ever built.

Next, a clothes mixer. In these days of pre-digested food and vest-pocket bungalows by mail, every man expects his laundry ready to wear. He's sore if you send him the same colored pajamas two weeks in succession.

Some authorities claim you can't run a laundry without a machine or two to wash the clothes, but this really isn't necessary. —George Martin.

Well filled baskets were evidence and at the noon dinner was served by the children who had come to wish their father many returns of the day. The occasion was greatly enjoyed, and Mr. Burnett, who is nearly blind, was given to feel that although largely shut in from the world, he was remembered by loved ones.

REPORT NINETEEN CASES OF STUDENTS CHEATING

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., Jan. 19.—Nineteen cases of cheating in the University of Wisconsin have been reported to the discipline committee during the past semester, according to the report of the chairman of the committee, Fredrick A. Oge, made public today. Previous to this time the report of the committee was never made public, but due to the desire of the students to know what was being done, the announcement was made. The penalties imposed on the students has commonly been to require them to earn from three to five credits more of work before they graduate and receive their degree. More strenuous punishment, such as dismissal, has been handed out in one or two cases.

Collects Much Tinfoil.
New York, Jan. 25.—Tom Wise, the 310 pound actor of Shakespearean parts, who started seventeen days ago to collect his weight in tinfoil, on a bet, has just thirteen days to go and he hasn't got anything like 155 pounds of the stuff yet. He'll probably lose a good dinner to Silvio Hein. He wants the foil to help him act; it sells for 50 to 60 cents a pound.

That John fell in love with the lady.
He saw her one night at the play.

He asked her to wed, all a-titter.
"My dad, don't you know,
Has oodles of dough.
WELL spend it," says he with a titter.
"I'll buy you six autos or so."

Said she, "Yes, I know that your father
Is wealthy, I do.

MONROE SOLDIERS RESENT TREATMENT

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Monroe, Wis., Jan. 25.—It a railroad strike results through an adverse decision on the Adamson eight-hour law and the state militia is called into service to keep order among the soldiers of Company H, who returned home from Fort Sheridan and the Mexican border last Friday evening, they will refuse to respond. They declare they were inhumanly treated by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad company on the trip from Racine Junction to Monroe, with nine and one-half hours consumed during the 125 mile trip.

Eighty per cent of the officers and members of the company are suffering from colds and grippe, and several are now under the care of physicians. First Lieutenant F. W. Heer declares that the car furnished for the transportation of the soldiers was broken in places and it was possible to see the wheels and trucks beneath. When we stopped between stations by reason of engine troubles the soldiers tore boards off the railroad fences in order to build fires in the car, but even with this suffered severely with the cold. When some of the soldiers entered other cars which were more properly heated they were ordered out by the conductor, until I convinced him that an American soldier is the best man on earth and able to go anywhere at any time.

I led first class transportation, and that further objection on his part to their riding in any coach they pleased would result in a telegraphic complaint to the adjutant general's office and a holding up of the train until decent coaches were supplied.

It is expected a complaint of the poor service will be made to the adjutant general.

NEWS NOTES—MOVIELAND

A thrilling "free for all" between timber men and claim jumpers is one of the features of the new production, "The Girl of the Timberclaims," featuring Constance Talmadge. The fight was staged in the log cabin colony which was erected especially for the production in the Santa Cruz mountains. More than 500 persons take part in the battle. The real, dyed-in-the-wool, wood cutters and for the production in the "big tree" district in the Santa Cruz mountains were engaged to appear in the battle scenes. Auto trucks conveyed the guns and revolvers up the trail to the mountains. The women put up a very realistic battle, making it one of the most spectacular of its kind ever staged. Some of the cabins caught fire and were burned during the battle. The battle took place at an altitude of more than a mile. A force of carpenters erected the cabins showing the big trees in the background. The timber-men said they enjoyed the battle immensely.

Eats little.
Drinks much—water.
Washes briskly often and long.
Never sleeps more than eight hours.

Sits in a straight back chair when she can get one.
Does not indulge in afternoon teas or after theater dinners.

Miss Kellermann believes that if children were compelled to swim in school they are to read and write we would have a healthier lot of youngsters about us. "In Australia," says Miss Kellermann, "swimming lessons are a part of the common school curriculum. I don't know how you strokes you don't know your lesson and it's just as bad to fall in swimming as it is to fall in spelling."

NO WEDDING.
Charlie Chaplin, recently reported about to be married, is now said to be waiting for his salary of $870,000 to be increased to $1,000,000.

The cost of living is so high!
All of which leads to a speculative inquiry to ask of "World's Mrs. Charlie Chaplin dare to bake a pie?"

vance sale of seats has exceeded all expectations and from present indications the coming of The Boston English Opera Company will prove the most brilliant society event of the theatrical season. Not only from this city but from every nearby town orders are coming and the probabilities are that hundreds of late comers will be unable to secure seats. Mr. Riley is very enthusiastic about this special co-star tour of the Boston English Opera Company. He says all previous efforts have been eclipsed and not only is the company much larger and better in every respect but the principals include the foremost artists on the English singing stage, in conjunction with the eminent French prima donna, Nelli Gardini. That the public appreciates this fact and recognizes from the list of star names is apparent from the fact that tickets have been so in demand which have greeted the company everywhere since the tour has begun. Invariably the house is sold out for days in advance and requests for return dates have been so insistent and so numerous that Mr. Beck is now making plans to give return engagements in "Madam Butterfly" to those cities which make the tour. For the sake of encouraging this fact for the sake of entertainment it is to be hoped that this city will be among those favored by a return engagement. The Boston English Opera Company will sing in Townsville on Sunday, Jan. 28.

Surprisingly Good Cough Syrup Made at Home

Costs Very Little and Easily Made, but is Remarkably Effective.

You'll never really know what a fine cough syrup you can make until you prepare this famous home-made remedy. You not only save $2.00 compared with the ready-made kind, but you will also have a more effective and dependable remedy in every way. It overcomes the usual cough, throat or chest colds in 24 hours—relieves even whooping cough quickly. Get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) from any drug store, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Here you have a full pint—a family supply—of the most effective cough syrup that money can buy—at a cost of only 54 cents or less. It never spoils. The prompt and positive results given by this pleasant-tasting cough syrup have caused it to be used in more homes than any other remedy. It quickly loosens the inflamed or tight cough, breaks the inflamed membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes, and relieves almost immediately. Splendid for throat trouble, hoarseness, bronchitis, croup and bronchial asthma. Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with glycerol and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments. Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex with full directions, and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, combined with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Nan of Music Mountain

By FRANK H. SPEARMAN Author of "WHISPERING SMITH"

(Copyright by Charles Scribner's Sons)

"The grip of her hands on the rifle might have relaxed somewhat, but she saw his deadly revolver in its accusatory place and did not mean to surrender her command of him. Nor would she tell him where he was. She parried his questions. He could get no information of any sort out of her. Yet he saw that something more, that his mere presence detailed and perplexed her. Her prompt condemnation of him raked in his mind, and the strain of faking her suspicion wore on him. 'I won't ask you anything more,' he said at length. 'You think I've no right to live—that's what you think, isn't it? Why don't you shoot?' She only stared at him. 'Why don't you answer?' he demanded recklessly. Nan summoned her resolution. 'I know you tried to kill my cousin,' she said hotly, after he had taunted her once more. 'And I am going to think what to do before I tell you anything or do anything.'

"You know I tried to kill your cousin! You know nothing of the kind. Your cousin tried to kill me. He's a bully and a coward, a man that doesn't know what fair fighting means."

"You are safe in abusing him when he's not here."

"Send him to me!" His voice shook with anger. "Tell him I'm wounded; tell him I've had nothing to eat since I fought him before. And if he's still afraid—de Spain drew and broke his revolver almost as a flash. In that incredibly quick instant she realized he might have threatened her life before she could move a muscle—'Well your fine cousin I've got one cartridge left—just one!' So saying, he held in one hand the loaded cartridge and in the other the empty revolver."

"You've asked me to go—I'm going. How much of what you tell me is true, I don't know. But I can believe my own eyes, and I believe you are not in condition to do much injury, even if you came here with that intention. You will certainly lose your life if you move from your hiding place."

She started toward him. He leaned toward her. "Stop," he said promptly, raising himself with a wrenching effort. Something in the stern eye held her. His extended hand pointed toward her as arbitrarily as if, instead of lying helpless at her feet, he could command her to his bidding. "I want to ask you a question. I've told you the truth. I have just one cartridge. If you are likely to be molested."

She stepped down from the ledge as noiselessly as she had come. Shaken by the discovery she had so unexpectedly made, Nan retreated almost precipitately from the spot. And the question of what to do worried her as much as it worried De Spain. The whole range had been shaken by the Calabassas fight. Even the men in Morgan's gap, supposed to be past masters of the game played in the closed room at Calabassas, had been stunned by the issue of the few minutes with Jeffries' new man.

Nan, who had heard but one side of the story, pictured the aggressor from the tale of the two who lived to tell of the horribly sharp action with him. But Nan's common sense whispered to her, whatever might be said about De Spain's starting the fight, that one man locked in a room with four enemies, all dangerous in an affair, was not likely to begin a fight unless forced to—none, at least, but a madman would do so.

Unhappy and irresolute, Nan, when she got home, was glad of an excuse to ride to Calabassas for a packet of dressing coming by stage from Sleepy Creek for Gale, who lay wounded at Satt Morgan's; and, eating a hasty luncheon, she ordered her horse and set out. Should she tell her Uncle Duke of finding De Spain? Whenever she decided that she must, something in the recollection of De Spain's condition unsettled her resolution. Tales enough of his bloodthirstiness, his merciless efficiency, his ever-ready craft and consummate duplicity were familiar to her. Yet only a few of these stories appeared to Nan's innate convictions of truth and justice. She lived among men who were, for the most part, not truthful or dependable even in small things—how could they be relied on to tell the truth about De Spain's motives and conduct? As to his deadly skill with arms, no stories were needed to confirm this, even though she herself had once overcome him in a contest. The evidence of his mastery had now a fatal pre-eminence among the tragedies of the Spanish sinks. Where he lay he could, if he meditated revenge on her people, murder any of them, almost at will. To spare his life imperiled to this extent theirs—but surely he lay not far from death by exhaustion. And if he was not helped soon he would die.

But who was to help him? Certainly none of his friends. If she told them they would try to reach him. That would mean an appeal back to an unthinkable—fight. All calling back to one terrifying alternative: Should she help this wretched man herself? And if he lived, would he repay her by shooting someone of her own kin?

The long ride to Calabassas went fast as the debate swept on, and the vivid shock of her strange experience recurred to her imagination. She drew up before the big barn. Jim McAlpin was coming out to go to supper. Nan asked for her package and wanted to start directly back again. McAlpin refused absolutely to hear of it. He looked at her horse and professed to be shocked. He told her she had ridden hard, urged her to dismount, and sent her pony in to be rubbed. While her horse was cared for, McAlpin asked, in his harmless Scotch way, about Gale.

Concerning Gale, Nan was noncommittal. But she listened with interest, more or less veiled, to whatever rapping comment McAlpin had to offer concerning the Calabassas fight. "And I was sorry to see Gale mixed up in it," he concluded, in his effort to draw Nan out, "sorry. And sorrow to think of Henry de Spain getting killed that way. Some say," he suggested, looking significantly toward the door of the barn, and significantly away again, "that Henry went down there to pick a fight with the boys. But," he asserted cryptically, "I happen to know that wasn't so."

"Then what did he go down there for?" demanded Nan indignantly, but not warily.

McAlpin, the situation now in hand, took his time to it. He leaned forward in a manner calculated to invite confidence without giving offense. "Miss Nan," he said simply, "Henry de Spain was here, with me, sitting right there where you are sitting, in that chair, not fifteen minutes before that fight began. I told you he never went down there to fight. Do you want the proof? I'll tell you—I wouldn't want anybody else to know—I will keep it."

Nan seemed indifferent. "Girls are not supposed to keep secrets," she said obstinately.

Her narrator was not to be balked. He pointed to the coat-rack on the wall in front of them both. "There is Henry de Spain's coat. He hung it there just before he went down to the inn. Under it, if you look, you'll find his belt of cartridges. Don't take my word—look for yourself."

Giving this information time to sink in, McAlpin continued. Nan's eyes had turned, despite her indifference, to the coat; but she was thinking more intently about the belt which McAlpin asserted hung under it. "You want to know what he did go down to the hotel for that afternoon? I happen to know that, too," averred McAlpin, sitting down, but respectfully, on the edge of the chair. "First I want to say this: I worked for your Uncle Duke five years."

He paused to give Nan a chance to dispute the statement if she so desired. Then, taking her despairing silence as an endorsement of his position in giving her a confidence, he went on: "Henry de Spain is dead," he said quietly. She eyed him without so much as winking. "I wouldn't tell it, if he wasn't. The boy's dead. And he was always talking about you. It's God's truth, and since he's dead it harms no one to tell it to you, though I'd never breathe it to another. He was fairly gone on you."

"You don't have to knock me down, Miss Nan, to put me wise about a man's being keen on a girl. I'm a married man," declared McAlpin with modest pride. "He thought all the time he was fooling me, and keeping covered. Now, that afternoon he came in here kind of moody. It was an anniversary for him, and a hard one—the day his father was shot from ambush—a good many years ago, but busy one of us had forgot it. Then he happened to see your pony—this same pony you're riding today—standing back there in the box-stall. He asked me whose it was; and he asked me about you, and, by jinx! he was perked up when I told him you were coming in on the stage that afternoon! When he heard you'd been sick, he was for going down to the hotel to get a cup of coffee—for you!"

McAlpin, like any good story-teller, was already on his feet again. "He did it," he exclaimed, "and you know what he got when he stepped into the barroom." He took hold of De Spain's coat and held it aside to enter his exhibit. "There," he concluded, "is his cartridge belt, hanging there yet. The boy is dead—why shouldn't I tell you?"

Nan rode home much more excited, more bewildered than when she had ridden over. Strangest shock of all that this man of all other men should profess to care for her. She had shown anger when McAlpin dared speak of it; at least, she thought she had. And she still did not know how sufficiently to resent the thought of such audacity on De Spain's part. This was, to say the least, a further awkward complication for her feelings. She already had enough to confuse them.

CHAPTER XII.

Nan Drifts.

Without going in to speak to Gale, whom Bull Page, his nurse, reported very cross but not hurt much, Nan left her packet for him and rode home. Her Uncle Duke was in town. He had the house to herself, with only Bonita, the old Mexican serving woman, and Nan ate her late supper alone.

The longer she pondered on De Spain and his dilemma, and her own—the more she worried. When she went to bed, upstairs in her little gable room, she tossed on her pillow till a resolve seized her to go up again to his hiding place and see what she could see or hear—possibly, if one were on foot, she could uncover a plot.

She dressed resolutely, buckled on a holster to her side, and slipping a revolver—a new one that Gale had given her—into it for protection, she walked softly downstairs and out of doors. The night air was clear, with a three-quarter moon well up in the sky. She took her way rapidly along the trail to the mountain, keeping as much as possible within the great shadows cast by the towering peaks. Breathing stealthily and keyed to a tense feeling of uncertainty and suspicion, Nan at length reached without adventure the corner of the ledge where she had first seen De Spain, and there, lying flat, listened.

Hearing only the music of the little cascade, she swept the ledge as well as she could with her eyes, but it was now so far in shadow as to lie in impenetrable darkness. Hardly daring to breathe, she crept and felt her way over it with her hands, discovering nothing until she had almost reached De Spain's retreat at the farther side. Then her heart stopped in an agony of fear—underneath the overhanging wall she heard voices. De Spain had confederates, then, and had tricked her, after all.

But a moment later this explanation failed to satisfy her. The mutterings were too constant and too disconnected—it dawned on Nan that this must be delirium. She could hear De Spain throwing himself from side to side, and the near and far sounds, as if of two voices, were explained. She crept nearer.

TRAIN YOUR HAIR AS AN ACTRESS DOES

No class of people devotes as much time to beauty as do actresses, and no class must be more careful to retain and develop their charms. Inquiry develops the information that in hair care they find it dangerous to shampoo with any makeshift hair cleanser. The majority say that to have the best hair wash and scalp stimulator at a cost of about three cents, one need only get a package of catnip from your druggist; dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and your shampoo is ready. This makes enough shampoo liquid to apply to the hair instead of just the top of the head. After its use, the hair dries rapidly, with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are quickly dissolved and entirely disappear when you rinse the hair. After this your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its lustre and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth. Advertisement.

At last the task of loading came to an end.

"Is that all?" inquired the cabman with polite incredulity, entered the car.

"Yes," was the reply. The cabman looked surprised. "Seems a pity," he ejaculated, "to leave the doorstep."

Everybody's magazine tells the story of a lawyer who for many years had shocked a large number of his friends by his rather liberal views on religion, and who recently died.

A friend of the deceased, who cut short a trip to Europe back to town for the purpose of attending the last rites of a friend, entered the lawyer's home some minutes after the beginning of the service.

"What part of the service is this?" he inquired in a whisper of another legal friend standing in the crowded hallway.

"I've just come myself," said the other, "but I believe they have opened for the defense."

MAYBE WE WON'T HAVE A GOVERNMENT ON MARCH 4TH.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS) Washington, Jan. 25.—A nation without an executive and without a legislative body, is what this United States may be March 4 unless Constitutional sharks trying to prevent it, succeed.

Sunday, March 4th, is the death-day of the 54th Congress and of President Wilson's first term. Three precedents are found in American history—in 1821, 1843 and in 1877—for adjourning Congress on March 4th at noon, as Sunday fell on the fourth. No precedent is found for continuing its sessions until the fifth. A resolution introduced by Senator Walsh, Montana, declares it is the sense of the senate that the present session expire on March 4, at noon. It has been referred to the Senate Judiciary committee. No decision has yet been reached as to when President Wilson and Vice-President Marshall will take their oaths of office. Either could, if necessary, take it the third, or again, be sworn in on Sunday the fourth, and then again on Monday, as a "guarantee" against fault in doing it Sunday.

Constitutional experts say the oath administered on Sunday would be completely legal and binding.

10 to 50% Advance on this Oil Stock Feb. 1

To make big money in oil you must invest with a company before the stock is boomed in price. In the last sixty days this company has opened up two gusher wells and advanced nearly double, justifying a big advance on the stock, but in case sufficient additional capital quick and another oil stock offer in the United States that has real producing properties and a vast acreage of undeveloped land that still offers the stock at a promotion basis. This company has about fifty times as many leases as any other oil stock selling company besides its refineries, pipe lines and oil gas wells and tank cars that could not be duplicated today at less than Two Million Dollars, saving nothing about the great value of the lands and leases.

There is about thirty per cent of the stock in the treasury for development purposes. This should bring the company about one million dollars. This now means that new wells on the property are certain to pay handsome returns and cause a big advance in the stock.

The stock has been advanced on a stock dividend basis and the greater your first remittance the greater will be your allotment right. Remember oil propositions go into big values on short notice. We are at work on fourteen new wells.

Drills are at the cap rock of production and other wells are being drilled around our many leases that may greatly increase the value of our different leases.

This company is owned by twenty-one thousand stockholders. No danger of being squeezed out.

Our chances are very good to drill in some real oil gushers during the next few weeks. We have opened a new field in the North Canadian district where we have started four new wells. Over thirty more wells are being drilled in this new proven field. This oil is now worth about $2.00 per barrel at our Cherryville Rodney which is connected with this gusher property by 150 miles of our "exempted" pipe line.

We have another gusher property in Lawrence County where we developed twenty million gas whether we developed the top of the rich Bartlesville sand. Bound to get oil gushers on this property. Buy this stock and secure a promoter's profit and become a developer and not a cash stock gambler. The Uncle Sam Oil Company is a bona fide oil company established. We have an independent market. It would take a four-page newspaper to record in detail the merits of the many different properties. If you can afford to speculate with a few hundred or a few thousand dollars this stock should demand your serious consideration.

We will send you copy of charter and further particulars free for ten cents. No need any subscription to or transfer of the stock. The stock is non-assessable. Refinances will be accepted on the following basis, subject to withdrawal without notice, until Feb. 1.

As part of the consideration the company reserves the right to approve or reject any subscription to or transfer of the stock. The stock is non-assessable. Refinances will be accepted on the following basis, subject to withdrawal without notice, until Feb. 1.
